THE POWER OF NATURE

BY CHILDBOOK.AI

Five friends—Kyler, Chynice, Eli, Cassian, and Nikka—sneaked into their school one quiet Sunday evening to film their class project. "Let's hurry before dark!" Chynice whispered. Outside, the sky turned gray, and the wind began to howl. They laughed, not knowing a big typhoon was coming. Setting up their camera near the window, they filmed their final scene, proud of their hard work, unaware that the storm was about to change their night completely.

When they finished filming, Kyler peeked outside and gasped. "The water's rising fast!" The ground floor was flooded, and rain poured harder than before. No phones worked, and they couldn't leave the building. Scared but brave, the five sat together on the third floor. "Let's share stories," said Nikka, trying to calm everyone down. They talked about their dreams and their wish to graduate together, and slowly their fear turned into comfort.

When morning came, the rain finally stopped. "Look!" Eli shouted, pointing down below. The floodwater was gone, but mud and leaves covered the ground floor. "How did the water disappear so fast?" Cassian wondered aloud. Ma'am Ann arrived to check on them, relieved to find everyone safe. "The forest behind our school must have soaked up the flood," she said gently. The five friends looked toward the trees, realizing something important.

Determined, the students and Ma'am Ann visited the Governor. "Please don't cut down the forest," Chynice said. "It protects our school from floods!" The Governor listened carefully and smiled. "You're right, young ones. We'll keep the trees safe." Everyone cheered, happy to protect nature together. From that day, Kyler, Chynice, Eli, Cassian, and Nikka knew that saving the forest meant saving their school—and their future.
