

MY JOURNEY TO TRELOARS

BY CHILDBOOK.AI

In 2014, Poppy Jones held her mum's hand as they walked through the gates of Treloar's. She was only nine years old, curious and a little nervous. "What do you think, Poppy?" asked her dad. She looked at the colorful classrooms and smiling teachers. "I like it here," she whispered. The visit filled her heart with hope for what might come next. Everything felt new, exciting, and full of possibilities she couldn't wait to explore. Poppy squeezed her mum's hand tightly.

Weeks later, Poppy sat in a small room filled with puzzles and gentle assessors. They asked her to sort colors, build blocks, and answer fun questions. She tried her best, though sometimes she felt confused. "You're doing great, Poppy," said a kind assessor. After the tests, her parents waited nervously outside. Nobody knew yet if Treloar's could be her new school. Uncertainty hung in the air, but Poppy stayed brave, trusting that good things were coming her way. She smiled, hopeful.

Poppy's parents wrote letters, made phone calls, and met with important people to secure funding. "We won't give up," her mum said firmly to a case worker. Her dad nodded, holding stacks of papers filled with reports about Poppy's needs. Months passed slowly, filled with waiting and hope. Finally, one sunny afternoon, the phone rang with wonderful news: the funding was approved! Poppy jumped with joy, hugging her parents tightly. Their hard work had paid off, opening the door to her exciting new adventure at Treloar's.

September 2016 arrived, and Poppy, now eleven, walked through Treloar's gates as a real student. She wore a new uniform and carried a bright backpack. "Welcome, Poppy!" said her teacher with a warm smile. She met new friends and explored her cozy classroom filled with fun activities. That night, she told her parents, "I love my new school!" Poppy's long journey had finally led her home, ready for wonderful adventures ahead at Treloar's.
