

THE TALKING FOREST

BY CHILDBOOK.AI

Msboombastic packed a snack, with Pandora on her back. They walked into the forest deep, past old oak trees that seemed to peep. "Let's explore!" she said with glee, and Pandora barked a happy "Yippee!" Then came a rustle, soft and low, a gentle voice said, "This way, go!" They froze and stared, surprised to hear a voice so soft and clear.

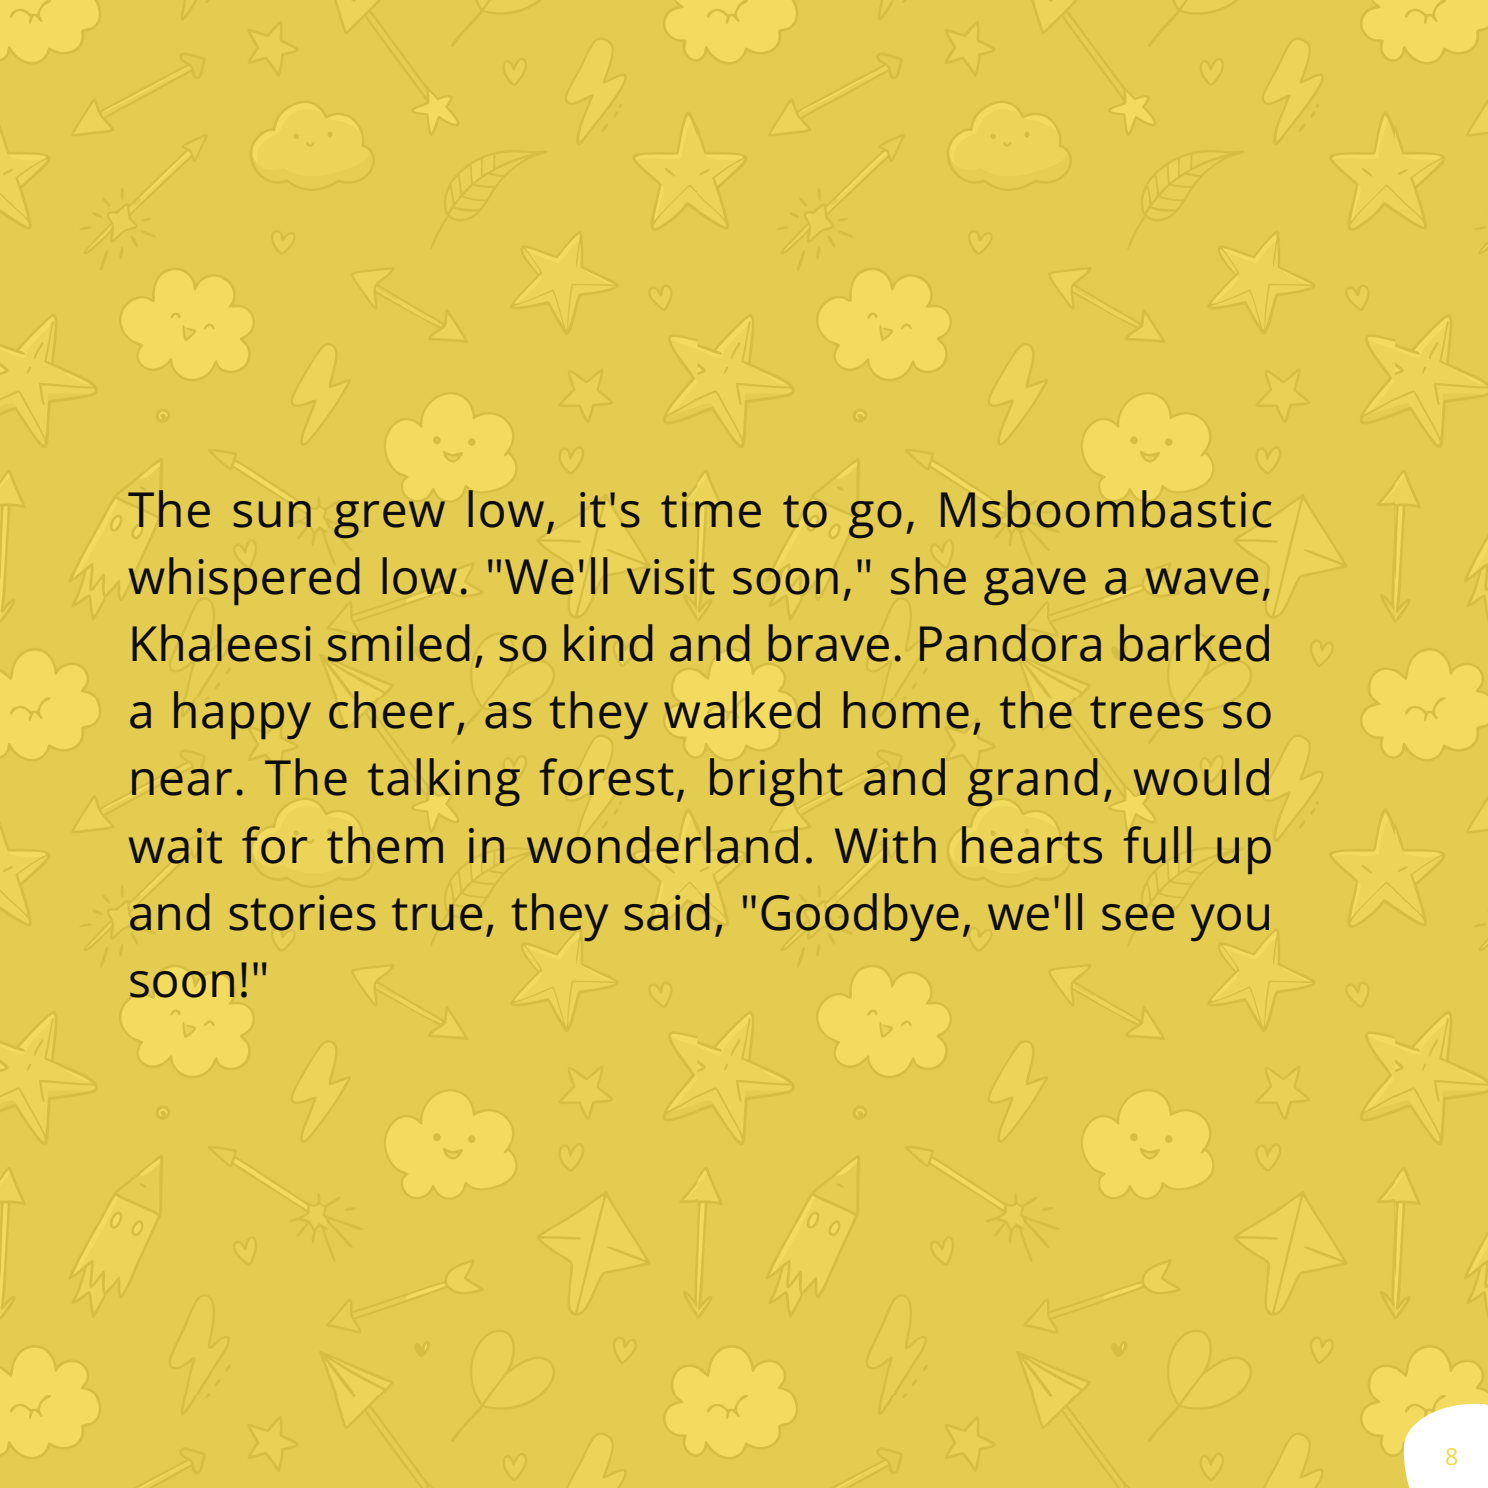

Out stepped a deer, dark brown and tall, with gentle eyes that saw it all. "I talk!" she said. "Don't be scared—in this forest, magic's shared." Pandora sniffed and wagged her tail, while Msboombastic gasped, "Well, hail!" "My name's Khaleesi," said the deer. "Come with me, there's nothing to fear." They followed down a mossy trail, under sunbeams soft and pale.

Khaleesi's baby fawn was lost, through tangled brambles, at great cost. "Please help me search!" Khaleesi cried, and Pandora sniffed from side to side. Her tiny nose picked up a scent, past mossy rocks the trio went. "I found him! Here, behind the rock!" The fawn popped out without a shock. Khaleesi nuzzled, soft and sweet, "Thank you, friends, you can't be beat!"

The sun grew low, it's time to go, Msboombastic
whispered low. "We'll visit soon," she gave a wave, Khaleesi smiled, so kind and brave. Pandora barked
a happy cheer, as they walked home, the trees so near. The talking forest, bright and grand, would wait for them in wonderland. With hearts full up and stories true, they said, "Goodbye, we'll see you soon!"
