

MONA LOVES ROTI

BY CHILDBOOK.AI

Mona found tiny wheat seeds in a jar and skipped to her garden. "Let's grow something yummy!" giggled her friend Roti, bouncing beside her. Together they dug small holes and dropped in the seeds, covering them with soft brown soil. Mona watered them gently every day. Soon, tiny green sprouts poked through the earth, reaching up toward the warm sun, making Mona clap with delight.

The little sprouts grew taller each day, turning into tall green stalks. Roti hopped around happily. "Almost time!" he said. Weeks passed, and the stalks turned golden and heavy with grain. Mona touched the soft golden heads, feeling proud. "Now we harvest!" cheered Roti. Together, Mona gently gathered the ripe wheat stalks into a big bundle, ready for the next step.

Mona and Roti pounded the wheat grains until they turned into fine white flour. "Now for the fun part," said Roti, sprinkling flour into a bowl. Mona added water and mixed it into soft dough. She kneaded it just like Roti showed her, humming a happy tune. Then she rolled the dough flat and round, ready to become something delicious.

Mona placed the rolled dough onto a warm pan. It puffed up big, golden, and round—turning into a real Roti! "Ta-da! Hot and delicious!" laughed Roti, puffing with pride. Mona took a warm, soft bite. "Yum, I love roti!" she cheered. From tiny seed to puffy bread, Mona learned every step—and enjoyed the tastiest treat of all.
