KROSH AND THE LOST STARBERRY

BY CHILDBOOK.AI

In the sunny forest, Krosh the lion cub found something glowing among the leaves. It was a strawberry that shimmered like a tiny star. 'Wow, a starberry!' Krosh gasped, his mouth watering. He took a tiny bite, and it tasted wonderfully sweet. But then he paused, remembering it wasn't his. 'I must find who lost this,' he said softly. Krosh picked up the starberry gently and hopped off into the trees to search for its owner.

Krosh hopped through the ferns and spotted a fluffy white bunny hiding behind a mushroom. 'Hi, I'm Krosh. Have you lost a starberry?' he asked kindly. Bunnie trembled and whispered, 'No, but maybe I can help you look.' Krosh smiled and thanked her. Together they searched under logs and behind bushes, calling softly for the owner. Bunnie's ears perked up with excitement, and for the first time, she felt brave enough to speak loudly through the forest.

Deep in the bushes, they found Spike the hedgehog, grumbling about noisy visitors. 'Go away!' he snapped, curling into a spiky ball. Krosh took a breath and said gently, 'We're sorry to bother you. We're looking for the owner of this starberry.' Spike peeked out, surprised by the kind words. 'Nobody ever talks nicely to me,' he admitted. He uncurled and decided to help them search, discovering that talking calmly worked far better than anger ever could.

The three friends followed a trail of sparkling dew to a glowing Starberry Bush deep in the forest. 'This is where it grows!' Bunnie squealed happily. The bush sparkled brighter, as if thanking them for returning its berry. Krosh split the starberry into three pieces, sharing it with Bunnie and Spike. 'Sharing makes it taste even sweeter,' Spike said, smiling for the first time. Together, they munched happily, knowing that friendship was the real magic of the forest.
