

UNDERWATER FRIENDS

BY CHILDBOOK.AI

Mia dove into the sparkling water, chasing bubbles. Suddenly, a tiny turtle blinked at her. "Hello!" said Toto. Mia gasped. "You can talk?" "Only to you!" Toto giggled, spinning in a circle. Mia laughed and swam closer. "This is amazing!" She reached out and gently touched Toto's shell. "Want to see more of the reef?" Toto asked. Mia nodded eagerly, her heart racing with wonder.

Toto led Mia to a cave where a huge purple shape wiggled. "Don't worry," Toto said. "That's Pogo!" Pogo waved a tentacle. "Hi there! Want to play hide-and-seek?" Mia giggled. "Yes, please!" Pogo puffed up proudly and hid behind a rock, giggling loudly. Mia found him easily because his laugh echoed everywhere. "You're terrible at hiding," she teased. Pogo grinned. "But I'm great at hugging!" He wrapped her in a soft, squishy hug.

Suddenly, tiny bubbles zoomed past. "Help! My backpack popped open!" cried Pip the pufferfish. A shiny star-shaped stone had fallen out. "Let's find it!" Mia said. Toto searched the sand, Pogo checked the rocks, and Mia peeked under a coral ledge. "Found it!" she shouted, holding up the sparkly stone. Pip beamed. "Thank you! That's my lucky star." He zipped around happily, leaving a trail of bubbles behind him.

As the sun dipped low, Mia knew it was time to go. "Will I see you again?" she asked. Toto smiled. "Whenever you swim with a happy heart, we'll be here." Pogo waved with all eight arms. Pip blew a trail of tiny bubbles that spelled "bye." Mia surfaced, smiling brightly. She promised to return every day, ready for more underwater adventures with her new friends.
