

PRINCESS POPO'S WONTON

BY CHILDBOOK.AI

"Today, you learn my secret wonton soup!" said Princess Popo, tying on her apron. Daddy carried little Princess Haisley into the cozy kitchen. Flour dusted the counter like snow. "Can I help too, Popo?" asked Daddy with a grin. Popo laughed and handed him a bowl. "Everyone helps! Even tiny hands." Haisley clapped, reaching for a wooden spoon. The kitchen smelled like ginger and green onions. "Let's begin," said Popo, eyes twinkling with excitement.

Popo mixed pork, shrimp, and chopped veggies in a big bowl. "Stir gently," she told Daddy, guiding his hands. Haisley poked the mixture with her chubby finger and giggled. "Yummy!" she squealed. "Not yet, little one," Popo chuckled. Daddy added a pinch of ginger, sniffing the bowl. "Smells amazing, Popo!" She smiled proudly. "My mother taught me this recipe long ago." Haisley clapped her sticky hands, sprinkling flour everywhere like confetti.

Popo placed a small spoonful of filling onto each wonton wrapper. "Fold like this," she said, pinching the edges neatly. Daddy tried, but his wonton looked lumpy. "Practice makes perfect!" laughed Popo. Haisley squished her wrapper flat, giggling loudly. "Silly wonton!" she shouted. Popo helped her make a wobbly, adorable shape. Soon the tray filled with funny little dumplings. "These are the best wontons ever," Daddy said, proudly holding up his crooked creation.

Popo dropped the wontons into a pot of bubbling broth. Steam rose, filling the kitchen with warmth. "Almost ready!" she announced happily. Daddy set bowls on the table while Haisley bounced in her chair. Popo ladled the soup carefully, wontons floating like little boats. "Try it," she said, blowing on a spoonful for Haisley. "Yummy, yummy!" Haisley cheered. Daddy hugged Popo tight. "Thank you for teaching us." Popo smiled warmly. "Now you'll always remember this recipe."
