

BEAUTI & ADORE’

by childbook.ai

Beauti stood before the mirror, frowning at her curls. "I wish my hair was straight like in the storybook," she sighed. Little Adore skipped in, beads clicking in her braided ponytail, her princess dress swishing. "But Beauti, your curls are like a crown!" Adore giggled, twirling. Beauti smiled a little, touching her soft curls. "You really think so?" Adore nodded, her pretty teeth flashing a big smile. "Let's be proud together!" she cheered, pulling Beauti's hand toward the sunny window.

At breakfast, Beauti hummed a gentle tune about loving yourself. Adore bounced in her chair, beads swinging. "Sing it again, Beauti!" she giggled. Beauti smiled and sang, "My hair is wonderful, my skin shines bright!" Her worries started to melt as she clapped along. Adore twirled in her princess dress, laughing with joy. "See, Beauti? We are beautiful just as we are," Adore said softly. Beauti hugged her little sister tight. "You're right, Adore. We adore ourselves!" They laughed together, feeling warm and happy inside.

That afternoon, the sisters played hairstylist. Beauti gently braided tiny beads into Adore's ponytail, matching her own soft curls. "Your hair looks like a princess crown," Beauti said, admiring the sparkly beads. Adore clapped, her pretty teeth showing in a wide smile. "Now let's do yours!" she said, carefully twisting Beauti's curls into a fluffy puff. They giggled, looking in the mirror together. "We look amazing!" Adore cheered. Beauti nodded proudly, loving her natural curls more than ever before.

The next day, the sisters walked outside, heads held high. Beauti's curls bounced freely, and Adore's beads sparkled in the sunlight. "We're beautiful just the way we are," Beauti said, smiling wide. Adore grinned, twirling in her princess dress, her pretty teeth sparkling. "Let's dance, Beauti!" she giggled, spinning in circles. Beauti joined in, laughing as they twirled together under the warm sun. Holding hands, they skipped down the sidewalk, feeling proud, happy, and beautifully themselves, just as they were meant to be.
