Kensie was very excited for her first day of preschool. She had her backpack ready and couldn't wait to meet new friends. Her mom walked her to the classroom, and Kensie felt a mix of excitement and nerves. When she stepped inside, she saw many smiling faces. Kensie knew it was going to be a special day.

In the classroom, Kensie met twelve new friends. They all introduced themselves and shared their favorite toys. Kensie felt happy to be part of such a friendly group. They all played together and had so much fun. Kensie knew she would have many adventures with her new friends.

The teacher gave each child a box of eleven colorful crayons. Kensie loved drawing and couldn't wait to use them. She drew a picture of her family and showed it to her friends. Everyone clapped and said her drawing was beautiful. Kensie felt proud and happy.

Next, the teacher brought out a puzzle with ten pieces. Kensie and her friends worked together to complete it. They laughed and cheered when they finished the puzzle. It was a picture of a cute puppy. Kensie loved how everyone worked as a team.

During playtime, the children went on tricycle tours around the playground. Kensie enjoyed riding fast and feeling the wind in her hair. She and her friends raced each other and had a great time. Kensie felt free and full of joy. The playground was their little adventure land.

After playtime, the teacher played some music for eight minutes of dancing. Kensie loved to dance and twirled around with her friends. They all laughed and had a blast. The music made everyone feel happy and energetic. Kensie thought dancing was the best part of the day.

The teacher then showed them seven shelves of books. Kensie loved books and couldn't wait to hear a story. The teacher read a funny tale that made everyone giggle. Kensie enjoyed listening and imagining the story in her mind. She knew she would read many more books in the future.

At the end of the day, Kensie felt very happy. She had met new friends, played games, and learned so much. Her two smiley teachers made her feel welcome and loved. Kensie couldn't wait to come back to preschool the next day. It was truly a happy day of school.
