

THE SHEPHERD BOY AND THE WOLF

by childbook.ai

Once upon a sun-dappled hillside, there lived a shepherd boy named John. His days were spent tending to his master's flock of sheep in a quiet corner of the forest. Now, this job might sound idyllic—green meadows, fluffy sheep, and all—but it had its moments of monotony. John's master had given him a stern warning: Beware of the wolves.

One day, John decided to play a prank. He ran to the village, shouting, 'Wolf! Wolf!' The villagers dropped everything and rushed to his aid, only to find him doubled over with laughter. It was all a joke.

John repeated this trick a few times, and the villagers, though annoyed, forgave him. But then, one day, a real wolf appeared, fangs bared and hungry eyes fixed on the sheep. John cried out again: 'Wolf! Wolf!' This time, the villagers hesitated.

The villagers said, 'He can't fool us twice!' and ignored his desperate pleas. Tragically, many sheep fell victim to the wolf. John realized his mistake and felt deep regret. From that day on, he promised to always be honest in his words and deeds.
