Once upon a time, a golden retriever puppy named Ralph was adopted by a loving family. Ralph was very excited to have a new home and a family to play with. He loved running in the backyard and playing fetch with the kids. Every night, Ralph would cuddle up with his new family and fall asleep happily. He felt so lucky to have found such a wonderful home.

As Ralph began to grow up, his family decided he should become a therapy dog. They enrolled him in special classes to learn how to help people feel better. Ralph was the best in his class, always eager to learn new things. He made many new friends and loved practicing his skills. Everyone could see that Ralph had a special gift for making people smile.

After months of hard work, Ralph became a certified therapy dog. He started visiting children in schools, bringing joy and comfort to everyone he met. The children loved petting Ralph and playing games with him. Ralph was always gentle and kind, making everyone feel happy. His visits became the highlight of the children's week.

On the weekends, Ralph loved visiting his grandparents. They had a big pool where Ralph could swim and play. Ralph's grandparents always had special treats for him, making his visits even more fun. After swimming, Ralph would curl up by the fireplace and listen to stories. Ralph knew he was a very lucky dog to have so many people who loved him.
