

PUJA AND THE OWL

by childbook.ai

Puja was a little girl who loved the moon. Every night, she watched it shine brightly from her window. But one evening, the moon didn't rise. A silver owl with glowing eyes landed on her windowsill and said, "Puja, the moonlight is missing! Will you help bring it back?" Puja nodded eagerly, ready for an adventure.

The silver owl gave Puja a magical lantern. "This will guide you to the Moonstone Cavern, where the moonlight is hidden," the owl explained. Puja held the lantern tightly, feeling its warmth. She followed the owl through the dark forest. Together, they crossed a glowing river and climbed a hill of stars.

At last, they reached the Moonstone Cavern. Inside, the moonlight was trapped in a crystal jar guarded by a shadowy figure. Puja bravely said, "The world needs the moonlight. Please let it go!" The shadow smiled and said, "Only someone pure of heart can ask. Take it!"

Puja opened the jar, and the moonlight soared into the sky. The moon shone brightly once again. From that night on, Puja and the moon shared a special bond. The silver owl visited her often, and her nights were always magical. Puja felt proud, knowing she helped the moon shine once more.
