One sunny afternoon, Ben asked his sister Sarah, 'What is love?' Sarah smiled, knowing Valentine's Day was near. She said, 'Love is a special feeling we have for people we care about.' Ben looked puzzled and said, 'Can you tell me more?' Sarah nodded, ready to share her thoughts.

Sarah said, 'Love is when you're sad, and I give you a big hug to make you feel better.' Ben remembered the warm hugs Sarah gave him when he felt down. He smiled and said, 'Oh, I like those hugs!' Sarah laughed and replied, 'That's one way to show love.' Ben felt happy knowing his sister cared for him.

Sarah continued, 'Love is when I miss you when you're not there.' Ben thought about the times Sarah went to school, and he missed playing with her. 'I miss you too when you're at school,' Ben admitted. 'That's love too,' Sarah said, giving him a gentle pat on the head. Ben felt a warm glow inside.

Sarah explained, 'Love is sharing my toys with you, even when I want to play with them.' Ben nodded, remembering the times Sarah let him play with her favorite doll. 'I like when we share,' Ben said happily. 'Sharing is caring, and that's love,' Sarah confirmed. Ben giggled, feeling grateful for his sister.

Sarah said, 'Love is helping you with your puzzles, even when they're tricky.' Ben recalled how Sarah always helped him solve puzzles. 'You make them fun,' Ben said with a grin. 'Helping each other is love,' Sarah explained. Ben felt proud to have such a helpful sister.

Sarah added, 'Love is listening to your stories, even if I've heard them before.' Ben chuckled, knowing he loved telling stories. 'You always listen,' he said. 'That's because I love you,' Sarah replied warmly. Ben felt understood and happy.

Sarah continued, 'Love is being there when you need me.' Ben remembered how Sarah stayed with him when he felt scared at night. 'You make me feel safe,' Ben said softly. 'That's love,' Sarah said, hugging him tightly. Ben knew he could always count on Sarah.

Sarah suggested, 'Let's make a Valentine's Day card for Mom and Dad.' Ben clapped his hands excitedly. Together, they drew hearts and wrote loving messages. 'This card shows our love,' Sarah said proudly. They couldn't wait to give it to their parents.
