

STORY 1: LORD KRISHNA AND THE BUTTER THIEVES

by childbook.ai

Once upon a time, in a lively village lived a little boy named Krishna. Krishna loved butter more than anything in the world! His eyes twinkled at the sight of it, and he always wanted just one more bite. One sunny day, Krishna gathered his friends for a secret mission. They had heard about a big pot of butter hanging in Yashoda Maa's house!

Krishna and his friends tiptoed into the house. They giggled quietly but determinedly as they reached for the sky-high pot. Krishna climbed on his friends' shoulders one by one, creating a wobbly human ladder. The stack of giggling boys teetered but didn't fall. When Krishna finally reached the pot of creamy butter, his heart danced with joy!

Just when Krishna was about to take a big delicious bite, Yashoda Maa walked in. Her eyes widened as she saw the naughty group trying to get the butter. "Krishna!" she exclaimed, pretending to be stern. Krishna looked at her with his big, innocent eyes. His mischief was hard to resist, and Yashoda Maa couldn't help but smile.

Instead of getting upset, Yashoda Maa hugged Krishna tightly. She laughed and shared more butter with all the children. "You always find a way to my heart, dear Krishna," she said lovingly. The children cheered and enjoyed the butter feast together. And from that day on, Krishna was known as the happiest butter thief!
