

DIFFERENT BUT THE SAME

Leo walked into his new classroom clutching his dinosaur lunchbox. Arjun sat quietly at a table, arranging colorful pencils. Mia stood by the bookshelf, her eyes wide with first-day jitters.

At lunchtime, Leo opened his container of fragrant curry. Arjun unwrapped his falafel sandwich wrapped in soft pita. Mia's bento box revealed neat rows of sushi and sliced fruit. They stared at each other's food, wondering why everyone ate such different things.

"Draw what makes you happy," said their teacher. Leo drew his family playing cricket in the park. Arjun's picture showed a colorful kite festival with his cousins. Mia sketched herself reading books with her grandmother.

"We all drew different things, but they're all about family and fun," noticed Leo. Arjun nodded, "And we all like drawing and colors!" Mia smiled, "We're different like snowflakes, but we're all still kids." They walked to recess together, three new friends who were different but the same.
