by childbook.ai

Miles bounced in his seat and pointed, "Look, Dad! A red car!" Dad grinned, "Good eye, Miles. That's one down!" Miles giggled as Dad made a silly vroom noise. "What color comes next, buddy?" Dad asked. "Orange! Let's find it!" Miles cheered, peering out the window with excitement.

Miles shouted, "Orange truck by the bakery!" Dad replied, "Wow, you spotted it before me!" As they turned the corner, Miles gasped, "And there's a yellow taxi!" Dad gave him a high-five, smiling proudly. "You're on a roll, Miles!" Dad said. Both searched excitedly for green next.

"Green car near the park!" Miles called, eyes wide and happy. Dad nodded, "You found it! Now, where's something blue?" Miles leaned forward, scanning the road. "There, a blue van by the school!" Miles cheered. Dad laughed, "You're so quick, Miles! Only one color left."

Miles squinted and shouted, "Wait! Purple bicycle behind that tree!" Dad clapped and smiled, "That's the whole rainbow!" They shared a cheer and another high-five. Miles grinned, "Car rides with you are the best, Dad." Dad winked, "You make every day colorful, Miles." They reached school, hearts full and happy.
