Leo gazed at the shiny Space Bakery and said, "Wow, Maya, it's floating!" Maya grinned, "Let's go inside!" They bounced in and saw Beepo the robot baker waving. "Welcome to the Space Bakery!" said Beepo. Ingredients floated all around them. "You'll need special weights and some math magic in here!" said Beepo.

Beepo handed them silver spatulas and cups. "On the Moon, kilograms are lighter," Beepo explained. Maya asked, "So we use fractions?" "Yes!" Beepo beeped. Leo bravely scooped Moon Dust Flour, counting, "Half a Moon kilogram!" Together, they measured each ingredient carefully.

The next day, Leo smiled, "Ready for the contest, Maya?" Maya nodded, holding Nebula Nectar. They measured Crushed Comet Candy using fractions. "I'll decorate mine with rockets!" Leo cheered. Maya placed little stars on hers, saying, "Let's do our best!" The robot judges rolled over to taste.

Beepo announced, "Maya, you win the contest!" Leo clapped, "Great job, Maya!" Maya smiled, "We made these together." Beepo handed them shiny stickers. "You're both math superstars!" Leo and Maya promised, "We'll come back for more space baking fun!"
